THE HINDSONIAN

NINETEEN EIGHTY

THIS IS OUR STORY

It all started on a Tuesday morning, August 21, 1979. For all of us as well as the faculty and administration, it was the beginning of another school term. There were feelings of felicity and of mediocrity—feelings of felicity because we were family again and feelings of mediocrity because we knew little of what the year had in store for us.

As the year unfolded and went about its way to bring us academic, social, and aesthetic rewards, there was a certain atmosphere that pervaded everywhere. It was one of caring and sharing. It was a story much distinguished from others.

We were involved in school evaluation which allowed us to take a thorough look at our school. It was just that time again to make sure our school remained top-rated. It meant long hours of work for many of us and all teachers. Not only did the teachers spend long hours working on the self-study report, but also long hours working in the classroom. It paid off because we were inspired, we were motivated, we were enlightened and we were endowed with values never before learned.

Our unique and very special story lies within the binding of this book. We have sought to show actions, qualities, in variations that have characterized our extraordinary yet conventional school year.

To some our collection of facts might seem to be an ill representation, to others it might be authenticity at its best. Nevertheless, whether the impression be good or bad, THIS IS OUR STORY.

laborious hours are spent composing the Hindsonian

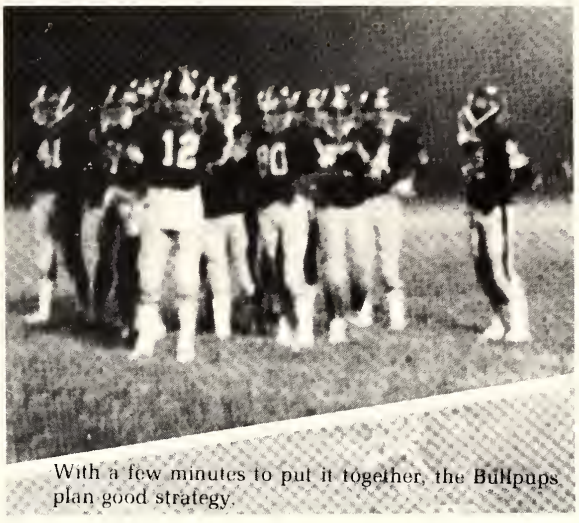

There is always the demand to use the school's most powerful resource.

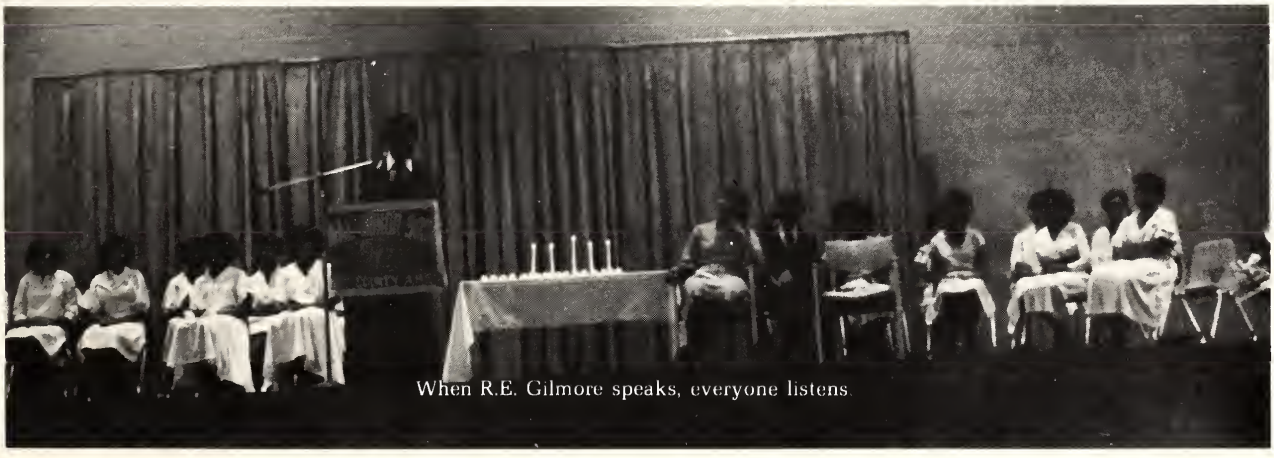

With a few minutes to put it together, the Bullpups plan good strategy.

When R.E. Gilmore speaks, everyone listens.

A camera surfaced to catch expressions by during the homecoming game.

A PART OF OUR STORY . . .

Hardly anybody misses a Thursday eating in the cafeteria. Why? Of course, it's because we have delicious southern fried chicken.

Say . . . are you guys by any chance very busy?

Mr. Strong's mechanical drawing class requires crafty thinking and persistence.

The Bullpups become aggressive in the last minutes of the Homecoming game.

The western look is a fashionable sensation.

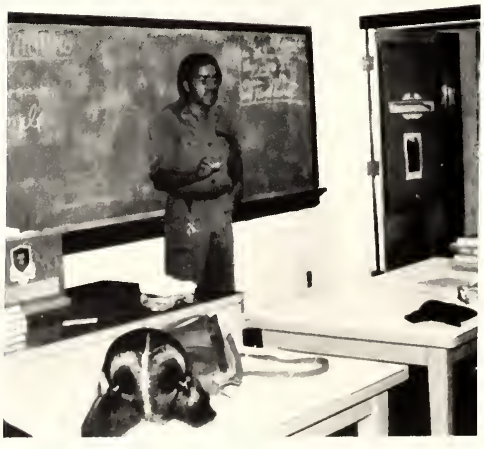

Carolyn exhibits a look of intelligence and dominion.

FUTURE FARMERS of AMERICA—It was another banner year for the FFA Club. The members worked extremely hard for their accomplishments. They participated in various contests, state and local, which brought Hinds and the organization itself special recognition. Involvement in special skill projects was also part of their experiences.

We were very proud of the FFA'ers and their accomplishments. Mr. Owens and Mr. Cole were highly complimented by all members for their leadership in challenging them to achieve through hard work and dedication.

Bryan Stamps, an active member of the FFA, wins first place in Federation Speaking Contest.

These participants boast their winning first place in Parliamentary Law Procedures. Mrs. Margaret Jenkins, chaperone, and Mr. Cole, sponsor, share this happiness.

Clement Floyd, a former member, wins second place (in home improvement) in a state contest.

GIFTED AND TALENTED PROGRAM

B. Stamps, R. Gilmer, S. Foster, B. Fields, C. Montgomery, D. Curtis, W. Brown, B. Jones, N. Johnson, M. Turner, M. Washington, F. Jones, C. Johnson.

Given an opportunity to study in the areas of art, music, math, science and electronics, students in the G/T Program experience another challenging year.

In addition to the special class offerings, the program included guest speakers and consultants in various fields of work, field trips, independent study, special listening sessions, and projects which helped to enhance and to broaden the knowledge of all participants.

Samuel Foster and Calvin Johnson make sure that they can apply learned theory in their electronics course.

Marcellus Turner and Vivian Kelly wish for a break in notetaking.

ADDED SERVICES . . .

The 1979-80 school year brought a new and much needed program to Hinds A.H.S. Very few high schools in the entire country can boast of having their own health clinic. The program, initiated and directed by Dr. Aaron Shirley of the Jackson-Hinds Comprehensive Health Center, offered many services to students at no cost.

Services included complete physical and dental examinations, and treatment for any minor problems diagnosed. Visual screening for eye problems and lab tests for various types of infections, pregnancy, blood count, and other health conditions were available through the clinic. Immunizations, pap tests, and pregnancy prevention were also among the services offered. Other services provided through the clinic were health-education rap sessions and individual counseling.

Staffers prepare for opening of new clinic.

If a student's health needs required specialized attention not available at the clinic, the staff refered the student to the proper source.

The staff personnel included Mrs. Jo Gregory, coordinator; Ms. Kay Killings, nurse practitioner; Ms. Patricia Moore, LPN; and Ms. Liza Mitchel, clerk, and the physicians and dentists of the Jackson-Hinds Comprehensive Health Center.

HINDS A.H.S. EVALUATES

It was that time again—that time when the administrators, faculty, and students evaluated Hinds AHS in light of its strengths and weaknesses. Each department gave careful study to its performances, facilities, outcomes, and materials. We are sure that after the evaluation committee comes next year, we can boast a good rating.

Working diligently to compile the fine arts portion of the self-evaluation report, Mr. Lee makes a few final changes.

Gwen, Cassandra, and Helen, students participating in the self-study, finish their part.

STAR-STUDENT

Faeza Jones, a native of Youngstown, Ohio, resides in Edwards, Ms. She is the daughter of Mr. & Mrs. V. Jones. Her hobbies are reading, sewing, and singing.

After graduation Faeza will pursue a major in pre-medicine with the intention of becoming a pediatrician.

While in high school she participated in the Foreign Language Club, Science Club, Chorus, and was a member of the Annual Staff, Newspaper Staff, and Gifted and Talented program. She was also president of the Student Council her senior year, vice-president of her sophomore class, and treasurer of her junior class.

She scored a composite score of twenty-three (23) on the ACT and graduated with the highest class average.

Her philosophy of life is "to give it your best shot, and if you fail then try it again."

Mr. Shelby L. Johnson

Mr. Johnson, a junior sponsor, and Social Science instructor is a native of Greenwood, Ms. After graduating from Alcorn State University with special honor (Cumme Laude) in 1971, he embarked upon his teaching career at Hinds AHS where he now teaches World History and American History.

FROM THE EDITOR

My fellow schoolmates, as editor of the 1980 Hindsonian, I share a great pleasure along with the other staffers in presenting to you our story for the 1979-80 school year. Though we shared unpleasant as well as pleasant times in this venture, we learned from our experiences.

I hope as you look through this yearbook, your memories of the school year will come to life again. I would like to express my appreciation to all staff members, and to those non-staffers who assisted. I extend a special thanks to Mrs. M. Hampton and Miss McKenzie for their guidance and devotion.

It is with both pride and honor that we present the 1979-80 Hindsonian.
